About the game

Players take the role of a commander who directs research vessels and fleets, surveys planets, establishes colonies, develops technologies and shapes humanity's future through strategic decisions. The campaign begins in the Solar System, then gradually opens access to interstellar exploration, diplomacy, trade and conflict.

Core features

- Explore, survey and colonise star systems and planets.
- Manage research, resources, ship production and orbital infrastructure.
- Command real-time fleets built from research, patrol, colony and jump ships.
- Experience story missions, dialogues, reports, cinematic sequences and decision points.
- Resolve situations through diplomacy, trade or military force, with lasting consequences.
- Face AI opponents that expand, collect resources, build fleets and react to player decisions.

The opening chapter

The campaign opens with the player's personal appointment as commander. After taking control of the first Solar research vessel, the player surveys Mars, begins humanity's expansion across the Solar System and eventually reaches nearby stars through jump technology. The Aelari are the first alien civilisation introduced publicly. Later plot developments are intentionally omitted from the press material.
